DID MICHELLE UP HER CUPS?

Former Lost star Michelle Rodriguez seems to have gotten a lot curvier since her regular stint on the hit show. "It appears she's had a breast augmentation," says Dr. Rey of the 31-year-old actress, who he thinks upped her likely small B-cup to a full C. He also notes that a roughly $8,500 silicone implant breast augmentation no longer has to interfere too much with a Hollywood schedule — most patients can return to work within one or two weeks.

A SLIMMER BOD — WITH NO DOWNTIME

Now it's possible to get a lean bod like Rihanna's without bruising or swelling. New York-based cosmetic surgeon Dr. Yan Trokel uses the new Zerona laser technology (left), which targets and separates fat tissue and helps the melted excess fat exit the body through the lymphatic system. He says patients lose an average of 3 to 5 inches off the waist after three 20-minute sessions ($500 each) a week for two weeks.
